Elections to the European Parliament 2019

Constitution for the European Union

A democratically legitimized EU needs one of the citizens in a Europe-wide ballot adopted constitution

Europe needs a deep reform otherwise it breaks

By the end of 2017, we had in the EU:

- In Holland there is an extremist party that has been growing for 15 years
- In Austria, another extremist party is part of the government
- In France, only 45% of voters elected President Macron
- The Mayors of many cities get few votes, which in some cases does not reach 40% of voters
- In Germany, the AfD party enter with force the Bundestag
- Italy no longer follows the rules of the European Union and begins with the "the reform of the European Union"

The New Europe: Democratic and Decentralised

A redesign process of the EU will only succeed if it differs significantly from the path followed so far. We will need to discuss a redistribution of power between the four political levels (municipalities, regions, nation states, EU). The objective must be to transfer competences back to levels closer to the citizens.

Elections to the European Parliament 2019

1st Pillar: EU Constitution Adopted by the Citizens

The Constitution as the "Foundation" of the New European Union. The unification of Europe must take place on the basis of common principles, as commonly set out in a constitution. This constitution is based on the customary principles of human rights, freedom and democracy, the rule of law and the separation of powers. The EU Charter of Fundamental Rights should be part of this new constitution. This Constitution will erect an additional political level. However, the member states will not lose their international sovereignty.

The citizens would have the final say in the Europe-wide ballot. The draft constitution will be either accepted or rejected by simple majority. In addition to a Europe-wide majority of the voters, a qualified majority of all member states is needed to adopt the constitution our proposal follows the Swiss model. Switzerland, the only state in the world without a "proper government" (Nassim Taleb), has established a direct connection experienced by every citizen between the sovereign, the municipalities, the cantons and the Federation.

2nd Pillar: Democratically Legitimised Institutions

3rd Pillar: Introducing Direct Democracy

We are for citizens' initiative and citizens' referendum at EU level. They are fundamental citizens' rights in modern democratic states, so they should be part of the new constitution. We believe that direct democracy in particular helps to prevent the European political level shutting itself off from the rest of society and becoming bureaucratised.

4th Pillar: Decentralisation and Regionalisation

Such a large entity as the EU – comprising more than 30 peoples, almost as many member states, countless regions with diverse languages, dialects and cultures – should be as decentralised as possible.

A joint Europe must be an individual construct, which consistently develops from the citizens, with a decentralised structure.

Switzerland and as well the extensive municipal democracy in Scandinavia are the most appropriate models for this.

We understand decentralisation in a way that allows any administrative unit (municipalities, counties, regions, states) to separate from a superordinate unit – through a citizens' initiative and a citizens' referendum. If applicable, they may merge with another administrative unit.

Elections to the European Parliament 2019

We only need the help of a partner organizations like “The Greens” to develop something better for the EU so as to carry out a campaign in the European Union asking citizens to vote for "the parties on the list"

Elections to the European Parliament 2019

“The Greens” Key issues:

Sustainable development, renewable energy and energy efficiency,
Human rights and solidarity, Democracy, Social justice
Structural change of the economy, Equality between men and women consolidation of pension funds, a fusion in the society with the equitable participation of the emigrants, EU participation, such as the European Citizens' Initiative.

A commitment to a green and social Europe!!!!

All these issues can be resolved from the elections to the European Parliament 2019 because the Political parties of the following list have as a priority the development of a Constitution for the European Union adopted by citizens according to project of “Mehr Demokratie”

Elections to the European Parliament 2019

Political parties of the following list

All the political parties mentioned in the list do not commit to any coalition with the rest of the parties EXCEPT to carry out a Constitution for the EU adopted by the citizens as a main priority once the new Parliament is constituted in 2019
